ISU #23 used the following foreign made equipment on the Berlin Canal Construction job:

> One three-ton International truck (German) One Ford compressor (US made) Two Chevrolet sedans (US made) Two US made three-ton Studebakers US made electric motors /quantity unknown/ German rollers, reppers, cement mixers, waggonetts, cranes, compressors, lathes and a German 200 ton ferry.

The performance of the Studebakers, because of their front and rear drives, was better than that of the ZIS-5 trucks.

The PX also had a photography section; a barbershop which charged one East Mark for a shave and 1.50 East Mark for a haircut; a buffet selling sandwiches and soft drinks. Soviet personnel were prohibited from entering any German stores. EM could enter the PX in Leipzig only in formation or with an officer escort. Officers could buy liquor in the HO (Handels-Organisation - German Department Stores). All other German places of business were off limits to Soviet troops. There were two German guards at the entrance to the PX who denied admittance to Germans. German black marketeers in the vicinity of the PX offered for sale merchandise which was very difficult to obtain, eg velvet which was very much in demand among the Soviet women. The velvet came from West Germany and a five m cut sold for 700 East Marks. The cost of velvet in the USSR was three to five times higher. The black marketeers also sold good woolen cloth imported from West Germany which was of a much better quality than the wool sold in the PX. They charged 1200 East Marks for a three m cut of wool and 800 East Marks for a three m cut of gabardine material. They also sold satin crepe at a cost of 300 East Marks for a three m out.
